Col. Gaylor succeeded in getting the order of arrest vacated. About the same time two orphans, beneficiaries under the while of a relative, served Cal Gayler with a notice to give an accounting of the trusteeship, which he has held since 1886. He failed to do so, and the heirs notified his bondsmen, Messra. Gillies and Rodwall, who were bound in $2.500 each, and who, in order to save themselves, got an order for an accounting to which also no attention has been paid.

selebrated Junghause murder case of this celebrated Junghause murder case of this city was revived to-day. A letter arrived here addressed to Theodore Zogel. It bore the postmark of Leumnitz, Germany. The letter showed that the murdered man's real name was Theodore Zogel and not Bernhard Junghause, and that he was a defaulter and a fugitive from German justice. He left Germany in June, 1880, after having secured several thousand dollars by inducing his friends to indorse his notes. A theory strongly believed now is that one of the victims of his dishonesty in Germany followed Zogel to this city and murdered him for his revenue.
